

The VFW is now busy completing the task of following the recent highly successful Summer Fair-successful from the financial as well as from the enjoyment standpoint.

Thousands visited Rolfe Park during the 3-day fair and, as promised, enjoyed fully the entertainment, band concert, ball game, Sunset Valley Boys and Art Cummings' boxing show. We appreciate the cooperation of the entertainers and the entertained as well.

We might mention at this time that the collection taken up from the stands Monday night during the baseball game had nothing to do with the VFW. We passed the hat to cover the expenses of the boxing matches only.

Our many thanks to the generous people of the community.

On Wednesday, Sept. 3, the VFW is to honor its baseball team with a banquet at the VFW hall. The team has won both halves of the immediate game in Concord and is now in a red hot series with Concord's best.

Boscawen's Old Home Days Recall Its Historic Contributions to State, Nation

Mabel Preve Seeks Register Position

Mabel D. Preve, veteran of 30 years in the secretarial field and operator of a public secretarial service in Concord, has announced her candidacy for Register of Probate of Merrimack County. Mrs. Preve is one of five candidates running for the nomination.

Mrs. Preve's experience includes 17 years as secretary to Attorney Robert W. Upton; 9 years as professional shorthand reporter for the Public Utilities Commission; and 4 years as executive secretary to state and national officials.

Recently a group of 24 prominent Merrimack County lawyers endorsed the candidacy of Mrs. Preve because of her experience and familiarity with many phases of legal work.

It pays to advertise.

THE HISTORY of Boscawen is a story of persistence, struggle and survival through the formative years of the State of New Hampshire and of America itself by a group of valiant Americans.

From the time the first settlers arrived from Newbury in 1734 until the end of the French and Indian war in 1759, Boscawen (then called Contoocook) was truly the northern outpost of civilization in New England. For there was nothing but unbroken wilderness between it and the St.

Lawrence river; no settler had his cabin north of King street.

It was in 1732 that John Coffin and some eighty other citizens of Newbury petitioned the General Court of Massachusetts for a grant of land on the west side of the Merrimack just north of the Pennycook plantation.

The grant was issued late in that year and a plot almost seven miles square was confirmed to the original petitioners in 1733.

Miss Frazee Married in St. Mary's Church

St. Mary's Episcopal church was the scene last Saturday of the marriage of Miss Barbara Lois Frazee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hazen C. Frazee of Penacook, and Mr. Robert Sidney Williams of Conway, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Williams of South Sutton.

A double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert O. Clement, vicar of St. Mary's, with Gerald Santos serving as altar boy.

Matron of honor was Mrs. William K. Lowry of Columbia, South Carolina, sister of the bride, and maid of honor was Miss Barbara Chadbourne of Somersworth.

Frank Williams of London, a brother of the groom, was best man; ushers were George Williams of Newport and Pvt. Russell Chase who is stationed at Fort Dix, N. J.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the Rumford Coffee House in Concord.

The couple will reside in North Conway where Mr. Williams is a soil conservation agent with the United States Department of Agriculture.

Croghan Gault of Suncook was a welcome visitor at The Advertiser office on Thursday night.

Our thanks to Ranald Colman, Walt Hazen's expert pressman, for assistance willingly rendered last Thursday when The Advertiser's newspaper press was in need of adjustments.

Mrs. Donald Blanchard of Canterbury is a patient at Margaret Pillsbury hospital.

Do You Remember the Old Bonney Tavern?

Built in 1787 by Capt. John Chandler, this famous old inn was long known as the Penacook House and was operated continuously until 1937 when it was torn down. In 1862 it was purchased by Hannibal Bonney who spread its fame far and wide by reason of his outstanding hospitality and the excellence of the table he set.

Penacook Legion of Guardsmen To Be Host for State Meeting

Saw the Young King

Mrs. Georgene Alice Chamberlain has just returned from a vacation spent with her daughter and family at Norfolk, Virginia. While there she was a guest aboard some of the large ships at the submarine base. On her way back to New Hampshire she stopped over for a visit in New York City. Highlight of the New York visit was a sight-seeing trip in which the young king of Iraq was a member of the group. Mrs. Chamberlain describes him as "a very personable and fine looking lad of 16 1/2 years."

BERTEL R. FOSS

Funeral services for Bertel R. Foss, long-time resident of Abbott road, Concord Manor, and retired B. and M. worker, were held Wednesday. Prayers were recited at the home and services held in the Congregational church, New Rye. Harley Boutwell was funeral director.

Penacook Honor Post, Legion of Guardsmen, will play host to the state department meeting on Sunday, September 14, according to Norman Stevens, commander of the local post.

This is the first time that Penacook has been chosen for the department meeting and a large representation of posts from all over the state will be in attendance.

HOBBYISTS VISIT ADVERTISER OFFICE

We chalked down two most interesting visitors last Monday when Dr. R. H. Abrams, professor of Sociology at the University of Pennsylvania, and S. W. Swink, restaurant owner of Utica, N. Y., popped in.

Both ardent amateur printers, these men spend their vacation each year touring the country to dig out old printing type and ornaments. We were able to oblige, but no offers were made for either the editor or publisher, both of whom we always considered somewhat ornamental.

Thumbnail History of Old Boscawen

Boscawen quickly became a prosperous and self-supporting community with its many small industries

The heavily wooded land was turned into fertile farms and pastures by the industrious settlers

The Indians and early traders were the first to know the fertile stretches of land where Boscawen now stands

It was in 1734 that the first settlers left their homes in Newbury and headed north to the grant of Contoocook

Boscawen was an important village on the main route from Boston to Vermont, an overnight stop for the little stagecoaches

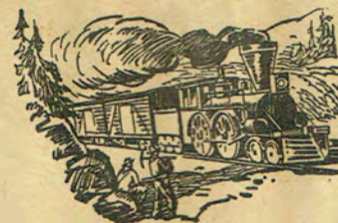

The town became noted for its many hospitable inns and taverns such as the famous old Penacook House, known later as Bonney Tavern

Resentment was shown to the white men by the Indians for they felt that the new town was intruding on them

Savage raids by the Indians did little to deter the pioneers from firmly establishing their homes

The coming of the first trains in 1846 signaled a change in the life of this lovely New Hampshire town

WHERE IS PENACOOK?

The flow of summer vacation traffic into America's finest resort state has brought a steady stream of visitors from our previous home in New York state.

Without exception these visitors have come into our shop on West street bewildered and confused for, having passed northward through Penacook they have gotten well into Boscawen before realizing they had over-shot their mark. Some heading southward have even had to retrace their steps from Concord.

Which brings us to a mighty important point and one that has bothered for some time. Why isn't there some indication on the main artery passing through that this is Penacook?

Anyone driving along the heavily traveled Routes 3 and 4, on their way to the White Mountains or the hundred and one resorts north of us, is completely unaware that this is Penacook—a good place in which to live, work and play—and, incidentally, to shop.

No successful company has ever won its position of prominence without benefit of advertising and promotion. And the same holds true of our town.

It just isn't reasonable to expect travelers to know about Penacook unless a little trouble is taken to tell them. We've a town to be proud of—industrially, commercially and residentially—so let's tell people about it.

"The wheel that squeaks the loudest gets the most grease," but right now the decibel reading of the squeak from Penacook is mighty low. The very least that can be done is to erect welcoming signs at the north and south entrances to the village on the main highway.

Let's knock the "W" out of "Where's Penacook." We'll donate a five-spot to start this worthy cause along. Any other contributors?

A SALUTE TO TODAY

This week scores of former Boscawen people will come back to the old town again, greet their old-time neighbors once more, shake hands with a few of the young-folk who have come to take their places in the many activities of the charming little community that once was their home, participate in the festivities of the occasion, and then return, carrying back with them nostalgic memories of little old Boscawen.

At the present moment we cannot think of a lovelier community to come back to . . . or a lovelier village to live in. Can you?

In this issue of The Advertiser, because these are Old Home Days in Boscawen, we have taken particular pains to recall some interesting chapters of the earlier history of the community and the great people who lived here. We have brought to your attention such famous names as Daniel and Ezekiel Webster, Dix, Fessenden, Coffin, Morrill and Moses Farmer, all great men and leaders in their particular vocations. This list, had we time and space, might well have been much longer. These were but few of many who have won fame for themselves, and honor for their home town, by their outstanding achievements.

We have always considered with grave concern the fact that so little credit is given those ambitious people who remain in their home-towns and here win a fair measure of success. Possibly their deeds are not spread over the front pages of the national journals, or in the chapters of the history-books but they deserve credit notwithstanding.

This, then, is a salute to the common-folk of Boscawen, to the everyday, ordinary people who elected to remain at home and avail themselves of the multitudinous opportunities awaiting them, or who made new opportunities for themselves.

Boscawen owes a great debt to those illustrious men of former days who brought fame to the community. But who shall say an even greater debt is not due to those valiant men and women of today who are keeping the community alive and active and in every way charming.

Recognize These Price Tags?

You see dozens just like them every time you shop — many of them carrying prices that are two and three times what they used to be. Because it costs the manufacturer more to produce these days, it costs you more to buy.

Today, it costs the Telephone Company more to give service, and naturally telephone rates have had to be increased to meet these costs. Equipment, wages, taxes, maintenance — just about everything we need to provide good service costs much more today than ever before.

Those attending the Red Sox-N. Y. Yankee baseball game at Boston last Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. William Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. William Bailey, Jr., Ida Donnelly, Dot Russell, Fred Blodgett and Beverly Blodgett and Beverly Bailey

Attention, Voters . . .

The supervisors of the Boscawen check list will meet at the Boscawen Town Library, Saturday, Sept. 6 at 2:30 p.m., and at the Torrent Hose house on Monday, September 8 from 6 to 7 p.m., for the purpose of correcting the check list and adding new names.

A boon to mankind, the mallard duck not only furnishes meat, but is one of the best destroyers of mosquito larvae.

Practice Beauty While You Work

When you are too busy to take time out for special beauty exercises, make work time your beauty time. Use equipment and accessories that protect your hands and make good posture easy. For example, use a long handled sponge mop with self-wringing device to clean floors and wash walls. With it, you can stand straight, and keep your hands dry. Wax linoleum with the same mop, using a second sponge refill, kept for waxing only. Just these two things, standing tall, and protecting hands, will help keep your movements graceful, and your hands young.

Hardship, Struggle Recorded in Story of Boscauwen's Settlement

THE DANIEL WEBSTER HOMESTEAD

Now known as the Daniel Webster Homestead, this old colonial home was the mansion of Ezekiel Webster Boscauwen's leading lawyer and citizen in the first half of the 19th century.

From 1733 to 1760 the settlement bore the Indian name of Contoocook. It was incorporated in 1760 and the name Boscauwen formally adopted for the entire settlement. The year 1860 saw the township divided into two almost equal sections, the eastern section retaining the name of Boscauwen and the western section being named Webster in honor of its foremost citizen.

First Settlers Arrived in 1734

The proprietors of Contoocook seriously began to comply with the conditions of their grant in 1734 and during that year 33 settlers arrived to build their homes beside the Merrimack. Included in that group were many names that are firmly recorded in Boscauwen's history — Barker, Bean, Bishop, Call, Cook, Corser, Eastman, Emery, Flood, Fowler, Gerrish, Gould, Jackman, Rolfe.

Crude cabins built of logs, chinked with mud to keep out the cold and rain, soon clustered together along King street. What a contrast to the lovely, white colonial homes that today line this road!

Much-needed and over-worked sawmills were soon erected to build the better homes needed once the settlers had more fully established themselves.

The growing need for a suitable place in which to exercise the freedom of worship prompted the building of a log church on King street in 1738. As the advances of the Indians became bolder, the first fort of logs was built as a safe and secure gathering place against the days when the inevitable Indian attacks would begin.

In 1744 the first attack by the Indians was made. Josiah Bradley, working in his fields, was surprised by a raiding party and taken captive. He was quickly killed and scalped and a great and dread anxiety settled over the town.

A grim determination must have been felt by these hardy people for, while the residents of other towns further south were leaving their homes for safer quarters, the staunch founders of Contoocook held their ground.

The wave of Indian crimes continued unabated until the end of the French and Indian war in 1759 with many white people being captured and taken to Canada by the Indians for sale as slaves to the French.

What a time for rejoicing there must have been in Contoocook with the announcement of the British victory over the French! Now the town could grow and prosper without the cruel and delaying interference from the red men.

In the following year the town was incorporated and the name Boscauwen was adopted.

Boscauwen Goes to War

The early years of the 1770's saw the feelings of the colonists raised to a boiling point by the overbearing attitude and actions of the English.

There was no hesitancy, then, when the citizens of Boscauwen signed their own Declaration of Independence, declaring themselves rebels in black and white.

On April 21, 1774 sixteen men under the leadership of Captain Henry Gerrish headed southward to lend their support against the British forces.

After the close of the Revolutionary war the growth of Boscauwen really began. Soon was to come from this little New Hampshire town a long list of men whose contributions to the development of their town, state and country are firmly written in American history.

The coming of the railroad in 1844 wrote a final chapter to the canvas-covered stagecoaches that plodded along King street, slowly wending their way from Boston to Vermont. Many of the famous old taverns disappeared. Gradually the tempo of the town changed.

Today as one drives along King street with its attractive inns, neat tourist homes and modern motels it seems as if Boscauwen still extends the hospitality of those days when no roaring trains rushed through the edge of this peaceful village or gas-and-oil-filled buggies zipped merrily through the town.

is a question asked many times about the derivation of the town's name.

Picture for a moment the jubilation in Contoocook that greeted the announcement in 1759 of the end of the French and Indian war.

The British had completed their magnificent campaign against the French. No longer would the town live under the dread shadow of Indian attack.

The heroes of the times were General Wolfe, who met his untimely death on the Plains of Abraham in Quebec; General Amherst, conqueror of Fort Ticonderoga; and Admiral Boscauwen.

This doughty, old sea-dog had practically wiped the French fleet off the seas in a decisive battle off the coast of Portugal. His keen naval strategy had destroyed France's last chance to furnish the men and material needed to defend its claims in North America.

Small wonder, then, that the town should take as its own a name that was on the tip of every tongue—
"BOSCAWEN"

See it While You May

This century-old covered bridge, the last of its kind remaining in Historic Boscauwen, still spans the Contoocook, no longer bearing its burden of traffic as it did way back in Abe Lincoln's time, but now a bleak and desolate fire-swept wreck. The storms could not destroy it, but flames and man's indifference have. See it while you may. Next Old Home Days it will be gone

UPPER BOSCAWEN

Boscawen Has Contributed Many Names to America's History

ALONG the lovely, elm-shaded main street of Boscawen, on which travels an unceasing flow of scurrying traffic, are located many outstanding points of historic interest.

Few, if any, of those driving along this two-mile stretch realize that this little New Hampshire town has contributed so much care to stop and browse, these contributions to American history. But for those who are well-recorded.

Civic-minded townspeople many years ago erected suitable plaques to indicate some of these sites and briefly tell their stories.

Dan Webster Lived Here

Of all the famous men of Boscawen who have indelibly carved their names in the history of America, none carved it more deeply than Daniel Webster.

World-renowned orator, statesman and jurist, it was to Boscawen that Dan Webster came to prepare for college under the scholarly direction of Dr. Wood, and to begin public life. Here he opened his first law office in 1805 and launched his meteoric rise to fame.

The site of this office is marked by a tablet and just north of it is the Daniel Webster Homestead built in 1805. When Webster moved to Portsmouth in 1807 he turned over his law practice to his brother, Ezekiel, and sold him the house.

Ezekiel Webster, a leading citizen of Boscawen until his untimely death at 49 years of age, was also an extremely capable lawyer and most eloquent orator.

His civic services to his town were many and included the planning and founding of the Boscawen academy.

The house, a hip-roofed colonial of two stories, stands today in a remarkably fine state of preservation.

John A. Dix Served His Country Well In Political and Military Career

A native son of Boscawen was John Adams Dix, noted statesman and Major General in the Civil War. It was Dix to whom is credited the famous saying, "If anyone attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

Born in Boscawen in 1789, Dix left to serve in the army from 1812 to 1828. He then settled in New York and became Secretary of the State of New York, serving in this capacity from 1833 to 1840. He was elected as senator from New York and then served as Secretary of the Treasury under President Buchanan. Following his active duty in the Civil War, Dix was elected Governor of the State of New York from 1872 to 1874. His death in 1879 brought to a close the career of an outstanding statesman.

Secretary in Lincoln's Cabinet

On the left going north and marked by a granite tablet is the birthplace of William Pitt Fessenden, another of Boscawen's famous sons. Fessenden was born in 1806, was elected senator from Maine and was appointed Secretary of the Treasury in Lincoln's cabinet in 1864.

At this time a financial panic was brewing following the resignation of Secretary Chase and the chaos created by the Civil War. Fessenden, a clear thinker and courageous man, took hold and induced the banks to adopt the national banking system thus averting a serious crisis. An eminent lawyer, Fessenden devoted a majority of his life to the service of his country.

Boscawen's Noted Clockmaker

Directly across the street from the Fessenden birthplace is the birthplace of Benjamin Morrill, noted clockmaker and a grandson of the Rev. Robie Morrill, second minister of Boscawen. The clock now in the tower of the Baptist church in Penacook was made by Morrill.

Just south of what was the old Morrill house, now the residence of Mr. Omer Lassonde, in the field in back of the big barn of Mr. & Mrs. Lassonde is a plaque indicating the site of the first fort in Boscawen.

This fort was built around 1739 and was reputed to be about 100 feet square, seven feet in height and built entirely of logs. It was to this fort that the early settlers scurried with their families when the Indians descended on the village in their frequent raids.

Coffin an Outstanding Journalist

Charles C. Coffin, Boscawen's foremost historian, was born in Boscawen in 1823 and started his journalistic career by contributing regularly to several newspapers. He subsequently left Boscawen to work in Boston on several newspapers including the famous Boston Transcript.

At the start of the Civil War Coffin became correspondent for the Boston Journal and covered the entire war for this paper. After the war he traveled extensively in Europe and later returned to Boscawen. He was also author of several books including his most interesting 'History of Boscawen and Webster.' A plaque is erected to his memory on Water street.

Scientist and Electrical Genius

It was not alone in the field of politics that the sons of Boscawen excelled, for Moses Gerrish Farmer, born here in 1820, stood foremost among scientific men for his inventions in the electric field. A musician and mathematician, Farmer turned his attention to experiments in electricity in 1845, inventing at that time an electromagnetic motor. His keen interest in telegraphy led to the building of the first machine for giving a fire alarm by electricity which was the basis of the present day system.

But for the unequalled courage and unconquerable spirit of the first settlers there would have been no history of Boscawen. It is to them and their zealous desire to protect their homes in the trying years from 1734 to 1759, when others were deserting theirs, that goes much credit for the growth of one of New England's loveliest towns. It was the descendants of these hardy pioneers who brought fame to the community that they had so solidly built.

'Induced Insanity' Reported at Duke

PINEHURST, N.C.—A case of "induced insanity," a rare behavior phenomenon, was reported here by a Duke University psychiatrist.

Dr. Leonard J. Ravitz told the Southern Psychiatric association about a strange case of fraternal twins, one of whom became the "echo" of the other's deluded ideas.

This case of "contagious insanity" has been recorded by Dr. Ravitz's newly announced electronic theory of psychiatry, linked with the solar system. By means of a microvoltmeter Dr. Ravitz measures the changes in a person's emotional disturbance from second to second, from one day to another, and from season to season.

Once, after twin "A" mentioned that he had produced many earthquakes, tornadoes, hurricanes, and floods, "B" thought a while, agreed, then asked, "Did you have anything to do with the snowfall 28 inches deep?"

This belief in A's power was clearly induced in B by A's suggestion, Dr. Ravitz said. However, B was much more suggestible to A's delusions when B's measurements—"electrical potentials"—were high. As his potentials decreased, B's suggestibility to these delusions decreased despite the fact that A's potentials were high. And A himself behaved much more normally as his potentials decreased.
